CALL US FATALISTIC about the forecast but we reckon we'll be wearing these excellent new Endura wet weather gloves as much in summer as we have in spring. Neoprene gloves for simple but effective wet weather insulation are nothing new, but it's the weight and fit of the Pro Nemos that make them stand out. Unlike most neoprene gloves the aptly named Nemos are soft and flexible enough to keep blood flowing and let you feel small controls such as Shimano Di2 buttons. They fit really well round the cuff and palms too and they've got silicone grippers so they don't slide about on untaped base bars. While you will get wrinkly stinky pinkies after a long ride in them, they maintain a decent temperature however hard it rains or blows and you can even use them for open-water swimming. They're really well priced too, which seals the deal on making them a wet-weather multisport essential.

VERDICT

Really well designed, great fitting, wet conditions gloves you'll use all the time
