

3 Endura Pacu Photochromic

£80 Lenses: 1

Scottish company Endura has a lot of eyewear available these days and the Pacu sits at the top of its range.

The one-piece light reactive photochromic lens adjusts to changing light conditions, although they're not ultra-responsive when going from light to dark – or through a tree-lined road section – the promised eight-second reaction time works just fine. The lens is vented so there's a decent amount of airflow meaning they don't fog up when you stop. The rubber nosepiece and arms don't slip, even on sweaty skin, and they were broad enough for a large head, staying comfortably in place for five hours of a sportive in changeable weather.
