➔ These lightweight, low profile guards sacrifice ultimate protection for minimal bulk, but they're still a great option for trail riders. The Terry cloth backed Neoprene material does a great job of wicking away sweat while keeping them in place, while small perforations aid airflow.

The main guard uses a small memory foam pad that is deeply recessed and moulds effectively to your knee. Small but effective bits of padding on the side help ward off light knocks. They use wraparound, Velcro straps, which means they're easy to get on and off without having to remove shoes but the body and straps twist round when getting them in place initially, although once tightened they stay put well.

"Light and easy to pedal in, although the straps are a touch fiddly."
