

WOULDN'T BE WITHOUT...

Stinking shards of joy
our testers love

Endura MT500 three-quarter tights

James Blackwell, MBUK Art Editor

Having kept my knees warm through the last five winters, the MT500s are still my go-to tights. The tough Kevlar flatlock stitching is keeping them together, but they have worn right through in a few places (which has increased airflow, I might add!). They've been assaulted by the big hands of Doddy and a bottle of eye-blindingly hot chilli sauce, which kept the cockles comically warm for a fair few rides, I can tell you. But they still fit well and do the job, on a par with anything else I've tried to date. I reckon you might just have to peel them off me in a few winters' time. ○
