Endura's gilet uses Primaloft insulation in the windproof front and rear panels to keep you warm on colder days. The rear panels are separated by thin strips of laser-cut perforations to help with ventilation.

Stretchy, breathable side panels aid the fit, which is aimed at the skinny racer. The insulation does a good job of keeping you warm even when wet, and it dries quickly too. Two angled pockets and one zipped pocket take care of luggage duties, while subtle reflective elements help you to be seen. The Pro packs into its own pocket, which is small enough to fit into a jersey pocket. Ideal when the mercury drops.
