Endura MTR jacket

£89.99 Endura www.endura.co.uk

THE NEW MTR jacket is designed to combine the high performance of Endura clothing with the minimalist demands of top flight cross-country racing.

It was designed in conjunction with cross-country racer Oli Beckingsale, and the fit is superb – no excess material, the arms are the right length, the zip is protected by a flap and the collar is high enough to stop water running down the back.

We were sceptical as to how waterproof a jacket that weighs next to nothing (it's designed to pack down into the MTR jersey's pocket) could be. Impressively, it's as waterproof as Endura's £89.99 Helium.

It works remarkably well as a windstopper too, and when combined with a decent long-sleeve jersey it's a surprisingly toasty affair. Even after several machine washes, it hadn't abated either.

Downsides? There aren't any pockets but, if you ride with a pack that's not that big a deal.

The flat orange is a great colour and combined with the reflective details make it an ideal commuting jacket too. With this level of all-round performance and weight we'd forgive the MTR for being far more expensive, but at this price it's a steal. RIC
